Not Alone in Objection

Harvard Refuses Federal Funds Because of Non-Subversive Oath

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., (UPI)—Harvard University last night relinquished its $357,873 share of federal funds for student loans because of objections to signing non-subversive oaths to receive the money.

President Nathan M. Pusey made public a letter he wrote to L. G. Derthick, U.S. Commissioner of Education, in which he said Harvard would return $107,873 and not accept another $250,000 earmarked for the university.

Harvard and other colleges objected to a provision of the National Defense Education Act which required students receiving aid to file affidavit that he "does not believe in, and is not a member of and does not support any organization" that believes in or teaches overthrow of the U.S. government.

Pusey said the "disbelief clause" was discriminatory in that it singled out students alone in the population as "subjects for special distrust" and was an "affront to freedom of belief and conscience."

Pusey said Harvard last year participated in the program in the hope that Congress would "listen sympathetically" to objections to the specific part of the act.

"It is our hope . . . that in its next session Congress will effect the change in this act which virtually the whole of higher education in the United States strongly desires," Pusey said.

He said that the oath of allegiance to the United States required under the same act made the "disbelief clause" superfluous.

Several other colleges have turned down the federal funds recently because of objections to the oath.

Yale Professor Urges Tax Cut In Incomes, Hike in Sales Tax

Compiled from UPI Wires

WASHINGTON, (UPI)—House tax writers were urged yesterday to slash income taxes by nine billion dollars and impose a 7 per cent federal sales tax to make up the loss.

The proposal was advanced by William Fellner, Yale University economics professor as the House Ways and Means Committee held its second day of panel discussions on how to make more income subject to federal taxes.

Fellner's suggestion drew a mixed reaction.

The Yale professor proposed that income taxes be cut 15 per cent across the board and that personal exemptions be increased from $600 to $700. He said the resulting loss in revenue lost could be made up by a 7 per cent sales tax on about 40 per cent of the current national consumption.

J. F. Due, economics professor at the University of Illinois, disagreed with Fellner. He described federal sales and excise levies as "relatively crude methods of raising tax revenue."

Due argued that a sales tax would encroach on the primary revenue sources of states and "lessen the overall equity" of federal taxation.

Activities Committee Reports On College Union Assn. Meet

Students, not the faculty, should control the Student Union, Barbara Wheeler, member of the activities committee, said yesterday in a special report at a Student Union Committee meeting.

Miss Wheeler and Duane Adams, ASMSU vice president and head of committees, presented the special report on the Region 11 Conference of the Assn. of College Unions at Moscow, Idaho, Nov. 5-7, which they and other members of the committee attended.

Miss Wheeler said MSU is the only university which has a faculty member board and not a student member board. One of the Students interested in attending the program may be excused from Wednesday afternoon classes, Andrew C. Cogswell, dean of students, said yesterday.

Excuse slips should be obtained through the Dean of Students office before Wednesday noon.

Moore and Krier Discuss Different Learning Systems

Panelists at Liberal Arts club meeting yesterday discussed the merits of an institution devoted to specialization as opposed to one combined with liberal arts courses.

Panel members were John Moore, professor of English, and John Krier, associate professor of forestry. Dr. Jesse Bier, associate professor of English, moderated the discussion.

Dr. Moore said that liberal arts are necessary to our society. He said liberal arts were "an end in themselves" and had a durability which surpassed specialization.

Dr. Krier said that the liberal arts were overbalancing specialization. He advocated a "balanced whole" in which specialization equals liberal arts education.

Citing the forestry school majors as an example, Dr. Krier said that students were trained for twelve years in liberal arts. As a result, he believes that possibly no further liberal arts education was necessary.

Dr. Bier then opened the discussion to the audience. One member of the audience noted that liberal arts does not prepare the student for anything. She advocated specialization.

Is the Issue Now Dead

Last spring, the debate concerning compulsory ROTC as opposed to voluntary ROTC waxed heavy as campus leaders, the student body and faculty members expressed their opinions on the subject, most of them being opposed to compulsory ROTC.

This September, school opened, but the debate did not.

In other states, the issue is not dead, but becoming more alive and important daily. The Governor of California, Edmund G. Brown, told a news conference that he personally was opposed to compulsory ROTC at the University of California. One of his reasons in opposing the program was the same as a reason used at the University during discussions concerning elimination of compulsory ROTC. The program takes too much time that could otherwise be used for study. Brown said that the drill was outmoded, indicating that its usefulness was gone.

Governor Brown's statement was political in that public opinion in the state of California was aroused against compulsory ROTC because of a student going on a hunger strike in opposition to being forced to take ROTC. But, the fact remains that a prominent man in state government took a stand on the issue. This is more than any person in state government in Montana can say, and for that matter any student body officer at the University.

The compulsory ROTC issue promised to be a topic of frequent discussion at student body meetings, faculty meetings and administrative meetings this fall, but to date, nothing has come of it.

Where are those advocates of voluntary ROTC? What has happened to their fiery arguments favoring the voluntary program? Has the Army frightened them with its threat to pull out if the compulsory program is discontinued?

Future conflicts will be fought with atomic weapons and machines operated from a great distance. The usefulness of the foot-soldier isn't as great as it was in the previous wars. Neither is training of University students in the arts of drill and ceremony as necessary as it might have been in 1940, or even 1950.

Compulsory ROTC has reached the point where there is a serious question as to its usefulness and purpose. Granted, the student desiring to enter the armed forces as an officer should have the right to prepare himself for such a career, but what is the reasoning behind forcing all male students to take ROTC?

Let Us Have Some Say

A student at Montana State University pays $20 per quarter in building fees. That amounts to $60 a year for the average student.

The State Board of Education in its meeting in Helena earlier this month gave Governor Aronson permission to appoint architects to prepare plans for two structures, a new law school and an addition to the Liberal Arts Building. This summer, the Board approved plans for another building and at the same time raised the student building fees from $10 to $20.

In past years, the University has been secretive when it came to discussing plans for campus construction, occasionally forcing administration plans on the student body. We hope that this attitude is in the past.

The student body deserves a chance to be informed of what its money is being used for, and it deserves a chance to have some say in what its hard-to-come by $20 will be spent for by the University. Students, merely by attending classes, have some knowledge of what is good and bad in the present buildings. Their opinions should carry some weight when the final plans for the new buildings are drafted.

Central Board should lead the student body in suggesting plans for these new buildings and it should also insist that it be kept informed of progress on this and other University Construction.

Editorial Inspires Action by Student

To the Kaimin,

In Tuesday's Kaimin a stirring editorial by Rolf Olson points out a few mistakes made in a recent search for two University students.

This editorial was entitled "Still Time for Improvement." Thank heaven! Let's organize a search and rescue organization on campus.

This University undoubtedly has students who possess the skills for a rescue organization.

When a person is lost in these high elevations the hours wasted in organizing a search can cost the victim's life.

Many students don't realize the inherent dangers of Montana's wilderness. Last Thursday three students showed up for a search party with low-cut shoes and sweat shirts.

In the last fifteen years two students have died from exposure. Someone had the grim task of informing the parents. Perhaps a search team might have made the difference.

If such an organization helped save one life then the time spent by its members would be well repaid.

WRA Swimming Meet Set for Tonight

Eight women's living groups will participate in the second annual Women's Recreational Assn. swimming meet at 7 p.m. in the University swimming pool.

An added attraction will be an attempt by the University swimming team to better the Skyline record for the medley relay. The record now stands at 4 minutes 10.5 seconds, though the team broke it unofficially last week with a time of 4 minutes 7 seconds.

Bill Brubaker, Beaver, Pa.; Gary Groshelle, Laurel; Scott Stewart, Topanga, Calif.; and Garold Tisue, Downey, Calif. will present a diving exhibition during intermission.

Events scheduled for the WRA meet are the front crawl stroke, front breast stroke, back crawl stroke and medley relay.

Teams from Delta Delta Delta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Corbin Hall, North Corbin Hall, Brantly Hall, Sigma Kappa, Delta Gamma, and Turner Hall will participate.

Judges are Eleanor Brown, Viola Kleindienst, and Mavis Lorenz.

M' CLUB WILL DISCUSS PROPOSED CONSTITUTION

The proposed constitution of the "M" Club will be discussed at 7:30 tonight in the Century Club Room of the Field House.

According to John Datsopoulos, president of "M" Club, the meeting is mandatory and all members who cannot attend must contact him or John Meese, secretary, before the meeting.

Veteran players are Terry Screnar, Dan Sullivan, Duane Ruegsegger, Dan Balko, Vince Ignatowicz and Paul Miller.

Sophomore starters will be Bill Smith, Kay Roberts, King Hamilton, Ron Quilling, Butch Hendricks, and John Robertson.

Game times will be 8 p.m. each night. Admission prices are $1 for families, 50 cents for adults and 50 cents for grade and high school students. Century Club members and MSU students will be admitted free.

Pucksters Tie Americans 6-6, Lose 12-2 in Second Game

The MSU hockey team, plagued by injuries and a small team, tied one game of a two game series 6-6 and lost the other 12-2 last weekend to the Great Falls Americans at Great Falls.

About 500 fans saw the Bruins and the Americans engage in a half-dozen fistfights in the first game. The scrappy Bruins came from behind in the last period with three goals to tie up the contest.

Center Al Craig did a tremendous job for the Bruins by scoring twice in the second period, tying the game with 11:20 left in the final period.

Jerry Sinclair, team captain, also showed himself outstanding by having 46 saves during the game.

"If it would have lasted another minute," Sinclair said, "we would have won the game."

The Bruins dropped their second game 12-2.

Team publicist Bob Leblanc said the team made a $150 profit from the game, which barely covered expenses.

The Bruins were scheduled to play Salt Lake City at Salt Lake next weekend, but the game has been canceled.
